By Andi Atwater

Wichita native Sarah McIntosh returns home to join the Flint Hills Center for Public Policy as its new director of outreach.

McIntosh will be responsible for outreach with legislators, the public and the media for the conservative think tank. She will work with Flint Hills fellows on the center's consumer-driven health care, education and tax projects, center officials said.

McIntosh, who graduated magna cum laude in political science and economics from Wichita State University, also will write monthly opinion articles.
