Flint Hills Center Editorials Appreciated

Dear editor,

I am writing to express my appreciation for the recent editorials penned by the Flint Hills Center for Public Policy. These articles offer a refreshingly different viewpoint to the monolithic liberal point of view generally presented in other columns. I have noticed that almost every time these editorials run in your paper, assorted firebrands write in to express their outrage that you would dare to present both sides of the complex issues we face. My vote is for more diversity of thought, not less.

Especially during this election season it is important to remember that there are two sides to every issue. I find it ironic that while the Left champions such noble sounding causes as "choice" and "diversity" in word, they are quick to pounce on someone who dares to question their orthodoxy in print (or on cable news). There are many readers, such as myself, who do not believe in Socialism or Santa Claus, and it is very enjoyable to be able to see an actual debate presented -- with both sides of the issue -- on this editorial page.

Please give us more thoughtful conservative commentary, not less.
